Rethinking Work: A Journey Toward Well-being

Too often, well-being is treated as a benefit outside of business, rather than a driver within it. In this session, Maddy Becker and Brandon Moore will share how their organization is embedding well-being into daily operations, leadership practices, and community partnerships. With stories, research, and practical insights, they will demonstrate how a company can create a culture that both performs and thrives.

Maddy BECKER

Organizational Well-being Advisor

Brandon MOORE

Executive Director of Learning & Development

Maddy BECKER is the Organizational Well-being Advisor at Kacmarcik Enterprises, where she leads efforts to integrate well-being into business strategy and culture at her family's company, Kapco. Currently pursuing a master's degree in neuroscience at King's College London, she combines research with a decade of health and wellness experience to advance mindfulness, emotional regulation, and the science of living well. Through writing, speaking, and global travel, Maddy inspires others to see well-being as an essential part of both work and life.

Brandon MOORE is the Executive Director of Learning & Development at the Kacmarcik Center, where he leads corporate learning and well-being with a focus on talent development and organizational growth. With more than 15 years of experience in manufacturing, safety leadership, and continuous improvement, he holds a Six Sigma Black Belt and leadership coaching certifications. Known as a change agent and dedicated coach, Brandon brings vision, purpose, and a passion for developing people both in the workplace and on the field.

Hospitals and public health departments each conduct assessments, Community Health Needs Assessments (CHNAs) and Community Health Assessments (CHAs), but often with different goals, methods, and timelines. When these efforts operate in silos, opportunities for meaningful collaboration and community impact can be missed.

This panel will explore how aligning CHNA and CHA processes can improve efficiency, strengthen community partnerships, and ensure that the priorities identified truly reflect the voices of the people they aim to serve. Panelists will share lessons learned, practical strategies for engaging underserved populations, and examples of successful collaboration across sectors. The discussion will also highlight the vital role of non-traditional partners such as schools, faith-based groups, and housing agencies, in creating assessments that are inclusive, actionable, and equity-driven.

PANEL SPEAKERS

Building Bridges, Creating Impact

Benjamin JONES has served as Waukesha County's Health Officer for over a decade, guiding Public Health as a chief health strategist. Under his leadership, the county has achieved national recognition, ranking 2nd in Wisconsin and 22nd in the U.S. for Healthiest Communities (U.S. News & World Report, 2022) and continues advancing toward a healthier, thriving community for all. He is known for his collaborative approach, strengthening partnerships across sectors to address complex health challenges.

Andy DRESANG serves as Executive Director of Community Engagement at Froedtert ThedaCare, where he leads innovative programs and partnerships to improve population health. Since joining Froedtert Health in 2010, he has overseen Community Health Needs Assessments, Improvement Plans, health equity initiatives, and charitable giving. Andy is a past chair of the Waukesha County Public Health Advisory Committee and is recognized for fostering collaboration between health systems and communities to create lasting impact. He is also a CHIP Co-Chair with Benjamin Jones.

Bridget CLEMENTI is the Vice President of Community Health for Children's Wisconsin and brings nearly 25 years of experience improving child and family health outcomes through innovative community, school, and policy initiatives. A passionate advocate for health equity, she has led statewide prevention and intervention efforts that foster meaningful partnerships across sectors. Bridget holds a Bachelor's degree in Communications from UW-Whitewater and a Master of Business Administration from the University of Phoenix.

Sarah BUTZ serves as Director of Community Benefit at ProHealth Care, leading efforts that strengthen community health through education, charitable giving, partnerships, and volunteer engagement. With over 20 years at ProHealth Care, she has advanced programs connecting healthcare systems with the broader community to address needs and promote health equity. In addition to her role at ProHealth Care, Sarah serves as Chair of both the Waukesha County Public Health Advisory Committee and the CHIP Healthy Aging Action Team, where she leads collaborative efforts to improve health and well-being across Waukesha County.

Hailey NENONEN serves as Community Outreach Manager for Aurora Health Care, overseeing community health strategy, charitable giving, and partnerships across Washington, Ozaukee, and Waukesha Counties. Since joining Aurora in 2016, she has led initiatives that strengthen local coalitions, support community benefit programs, and expand access to health education through a dedicated team of outreach nurses. Hailey also serves on several regional non-profit boards and remains committed to building connections that promote wellness throughout southeastern Wisconsin.

HEALTHY AGING

MENTAL HEALTH

SUBSTANCE USE

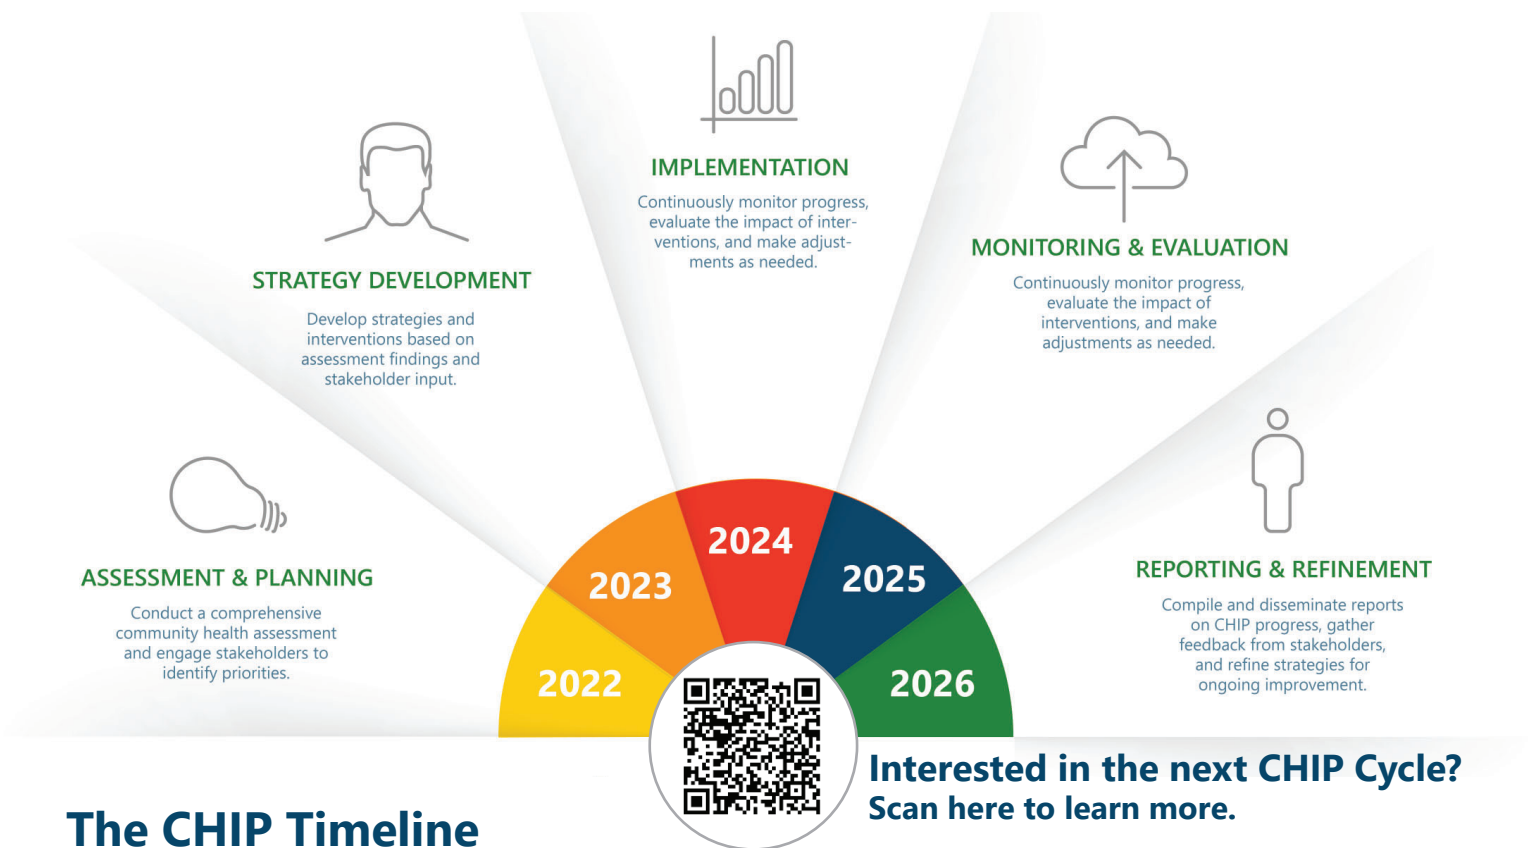

What is CHIP?

Waukesha County Public Health develops a Community Health Improvement Plan (CHIP) every five years to enhance the community's health. The CHIP Steering Committee, consisting of a diverse group of Health and Human Services employees and community members from various sectors such as healthcare, government, nonprofits, businesses, education, and faith-based organizations, drives this initiative.

The CHIP process actively engages community members who collect and analyze health data. This data forms the basis for informed decision-making, prioritizing health issues, and crafting actionable plans aimed at boosting community health outcomes.

CHIP Vision: Waukesha County is an inclusive and well-connected community supporting all people, embracing diversity, ensuring equitable access to services, and creating social, physical, and economic environments that promote health, well-being and quality of life.

The strategic health priorities for the 2022 - 2026 cycle are: Healthy Aging, Mental Health & Substance Use.

The CHIP Timeline

Qualitative and quantitative data drive our decisions in CHIP. The Waukesha County CHIP focuses on sustaining successful interventions, integrating CHIP goals into organizational and community practices, and planning for the next cycle of the CHIP process.
