

Competitive County Benchmark: An Economically Vibrant County

Measures of a county's economic health are its personal income per capita and median household income. Household income depends on wages and the number of working household members. Median household income is a reflection of the economic standing of families.

2008 estimates are used for both median household income and per capita income since 2008 is the latest year per capita income figures are available. Consists of latest updated figures available.*

SOURCE: US Dept. of Commerce — Census Bureau & Bureau of Economic Analysis